From the President's Easel

It's finally April! It has been already a busy year for our society. Between membership renewals, workshop planning, and organizing MPS exhibitions, your board has been very busy. However, before I give you the rundown on upcoming activities, it is with deep sadness that I tell you that two of our signature members passed away in March. Betsy Goldsborough was a founding and signature member of Maryland Pastel Society and served on the board for many years, and Brian Gray, whose landscapes celebrated the seasons with a tangible realism. Both were participants in MPS exhibitions and activities. We celebrate their lives! If you did not know Betsy or Brian well, please take time to view their paintings and read about them below.

We are excited about our upcoming Members' Only Exhibition, "Compelling Color". It will be held at the A.W. Gravely Gallery in Saint Michael's, Maryland, May 4-28. Our reception will coincide with Saint Michaels Art Walk, May 12. We hope you join us! We also look forward to the first of three 2018 workshops: renowned figure painter Margaret Dyer will be teaching a 3-day workshop in early May.

You are in for a real treat at our Spring Meeting on April 21st. Betsy Kellum will be our guest artist. Betsy is an award-winning pastelist who is well-known for her splendid still life paintings. Betsy is a signature member of the Pastel Society of America and numerous other pastel societies across the country. She has served as juror and judge for numerous art shows at the local, state and regional level. Betsy has been featured in The Pastel Journal, American Art Collector, The Best of Virginia; Artists & Artisans, The Best of America; Pastels, The Encyclopedia of Living Artists, The Chronical; History of the Catherine Lorillard Wolfe Art Club and others.

Mark your calendar now for our summer meeting! Colorfin, the creators of PanPastel, will join us to tell us about their product. Not only will the manufacturer demo techniques for using PanPastel, you will have the opportunity to test it out. This fun event will be on July 14th.

Be sure to watch your email and check the web page for news updates and announcements regarding more activities coming up this year. There will be a signature members show this summer, two fantastic fall workshops, and internationally acclaimed pastel painter, Tony Allain, will do a demo at

Next Meeting

Our Spring General Meeting will be held Saturday, April 21, from noon to 4 pm at the Gary J. Arthur Community Center in Glenwood, Maryland.

MPS is excited to have Betsy Kellum presenting a demonstration on The Making of a Still Life, including a power point introduction, at our upcoming meeting on April 21. You may recall her clever painting titled "The Politician" in last year's MPS Juried National Exhibition, "Shades of Pastel." She describes her work as classical and contemporary Realism.

Betsy was raised in the Washington D.C. area and graduated from William and Mary College. She taught elementary school for seven years and later, after staying home with her children, decided to explore a career in painting. She had two years of intensive study at the Art League School in Old Town Alexandria, VA. Additionally, she has attended workshops with Burton Silverman, Albert Handell, Robert Liberace, Doug Dawson, Roger Dale Brown, Mark Lague and others.

Betsy teaches adult art classes and has served as juror and judge for numerous shows at the local, state and regional levels. Her work has been published in national publications such as Pastel Journal, American Art Collector, The Best of Virginia, Artists and Artisans, The Best of America: Pastels, The Encyclopedia of Living Artists and others.

Past Events- Winter Meeting

Jean Hirons - Confessions of a Colorist

Jean Hirons answers questions with her underpainting laid in before alcohol has been applied.

Color is the most important thing in painting to long-timer MPS member Jean Hirons, who honored us with a landscape demonstration at our Winter meeting in January. She says "color harmony" is more specifically what she is all about. She defines color theory as "having three properties- HUE, VALUE, and CHROMA (saturation). Color temperature is relative."

Jean's decision-making process is methodical. She asks herself three key questions: "Where am I going?" "Where should I begin?" and "How should the color develop?". She prefers working from photographs and begins by studying them carefully for the compositions within. The next step is setting up her color palette which Jean describes as interpretive as well as intuitive. Her palette is always a limited one, and she likes to work with split complements on the color wheel.

On 20"x 20" UART 320 mounted paper, Jean has loosely sketched her composition from the photo reference to her left. She has both a color study and a black and white version of the photo to help her consider value relationships. She states she is not overly concerned with finding a focal point in her compositions.

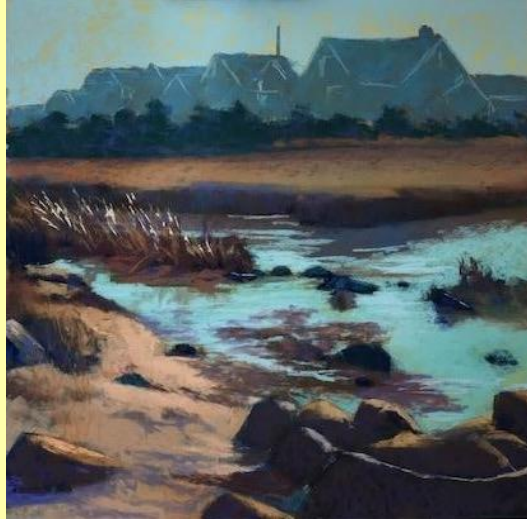

As Jean begins her underpainting, she is careful that values are correct. "Color doesn't really matter at this stage." Often she will place a warm color in her underpainting where a cool color will ultimately be painted and vice-versa.

Her subject is a sandy rocky beach by a waterway, running behind a row of houses with trees and a distant grassy shore. This is a coastal scene from her home town in Massachusetts and she knows it well. "It helps to be acquainted with your subject when working from photographs," she says. As her underpainting develops, one can detect where the light and shadow will occur. Jean says "The whole point of an underpainting is to create large value shapes." After the underpainting is laid in, a stiff brush is used to carefully paint with Isopropyl Alcohol over the entire format. Jean is careful not to let colors bleed into each other so as not to lose her well-thoughtout value masses. This "sets" the underpainting and allows additional color to be applied over but not mix with soft pastel from the underpainting.

Jean finished underpainting with large value shapes and color harmony. Alcohol has been applied.

When the final phase begins, Jean starts at the top of the format and works her way down. That way, she says, the pastel dust does not fall on the rest of the painting from heavily applied areas. As she paints, she plays with color temperature while holding fast to her initial value solutions. The warm yellow underpainting in the water now peaks through the cooler blues and greens in spots, giving the feel of sunlight.

Jean's painting at meeting's end.

Jean added marks thoughtfully and was careful to allow the underpainting to stay visible here and there, especially in the sky creating luminosity and space. We can feel the warmth of the sun. Even though the painting had yet to be finished, we could see how the underpainting informs the layers of color on top. Shapes that were cool in the underpainting are now warmer, while what was warm is now cooler. Her palette of oranges and blues is harmonious and inviting. Through light and shadow, the eye moves around the composition.

A popular teacher of pastel since 2004, Jean discusses her three approaches to color in her book, Finding Your Style in Pastel. She has been a member of MPS for many years and served as MPS president from 2007-2009. She has taught pastel at Montgomery College, the Yellow Barn, and now teaches at Artists and Makers Studios in Rockville. She is a signature member of the Pastel Society of America and a member of the Master Circle of the International Association of Pastel Societies. Her paintings have won many awards, including the recent "Best Landscape" award in the MPS "Shades of Pastel" national juried exhibition. Her website and blog are available by visiting jeanhiron.com. Thank you, Jean.

A Look at Pan Pastels

by Pam Sheary

Just when you think you have all the pastel supplies you need, someone introduces you to PanPastel. You may have seen it advertised. PanPastel consists of small .3 oz square pans of rich, vibrant color created using a special process that combines artist quality pure pigment with minimal binder.

PanPastel, manufactured by ColorFin, is gaining popularity, and has been available on the market for several years. It is an ideal medium for blending to create an infinite palette of colors. PanPastel can be used alone or in combination with traditional stick pastels on most surfaces, from smooth to rough tooth. It work especially well in creating underpaintings by producing broad strokes using large sponges and angel wedges to apply color.

Because PanPastel is applied in a similar technique to painting, it is ideal for creating skiescapes, seascaapes, waterfalls, and foggy scenes. More finely detailed and painterly marks can be introduced into a painting using a special Softtool applicator, available with a square, oval, or triangular tip. Load color onto the applicator by gently moving it in a circular motion on the color in the pan.

Changing colors is easily accomplished by wiping the sponge or applicator on a towel or chamois cloth before loading another color. Color-mixing can be accomplished on the paper or in the pan; simply wipe the pan clean first to avoid unwanted results. PanPastel is very versatile and can also be used with non-pastel mediums such as watercolor to create interesting effects.

You may be asking what could be the advantages to yet another form of soft pastel. For one, PanPastel generates very low levels of dust, allowing an artist who has breathing concerns but loves the medium to continue with pastel. Secondly, PanPastel is very forgiving. Undesirable marks can be removed easily using a gum Arabic eraser.

Artist quality PanPastel is lightfast, fully erasable, and is compatible with fixatives. Fixatives can be used to isolate a pastel layer or to provide a better surface on a less toothy surface, depending on your preference. It can be fun to experiment with this technique. Though not essential, fixative can be used to protect the painting.

Interested in learning more? Mark your calendar now for our summer meeting, July 14! Colorfin, the creators of PanPastel, will join us to tell us about their product. Not only will the manufacturer demo techniques for using PanPastel, we will have the opportunity to test it out. What a great opportunity to try a new product and possibly open up a brand new avenue of adventures in our shared passion for the medium of pastel.

Visit www.panpastel.com to learn more.
